

I am very happy with my ISP and do not want some one telling me who my ISP HAS to be because I choose to live where I do. Part of the reasons we have de-regulation in the telecommunications and electrical companies is to give the PEOPLE of this great country a choice in providers. I think this needs to include ISP's. I now have a choice and want to keep that choice. This makes the companies have to keep it's customers happy to keep there business. This will change if you give a monopoly back to the phone companies. And as far as Verizon is concerned if they can't do any better of a job as an ISP than they do as a wireless provider than they don't need in the business anyway.
